Dictionary. There has been a lot of litigation along this area, on this area of the Missouri River, so this is not new ground in terms of...there's a pun, not intended. But we have looked at this quite carefully. I will also say that this bill was identical to one passed in 1971 by this Legislature. So, in essence, we passed it first. To meet Senator Chambers' interest, we did pass this bill in 1971; at that time, Missouri did not. Now we are back at it and we are still using our same language. So if there is pride of authorship, we can truly say it was the Nebraska Unicameral and not the Missouri/Nebraska "tricameral."

PRESIDENT ROBAK: Thank you, Senator Wehrbein. Senator Tyson.

SENATOR TYSON: Thank you, Madam President. I only rise to speak because Senator Chambers brought up a couple of...a couple of points that I think bear at least a little consideration. Those who go and visit the steamer Bertrand, which is a former Nebraska tourist site but it wasn't a tourist site when we had it. Actually, the steamer Bertrand is in Mondamin, Iowa, or outside Mondamin, Iowa. And the reason it's there is because Nebraska is slowly being consumed by Iowa and Missouri. Actually the steamer Bertrand, as you probably all know, left the dock at DeSoto City on April 1, 1865, proceeded up river and either hit a sawyer or ran onto to a snag and sank, but it was in the middle of the river. It is now on dryland on the Iowa side. I think that this probably is a plot by Senator Wehrbein to gradually extend Iowa and Missouri through Nebraska, not into Nebraska, through Nebraska so that the Missouri River which, in about 100,000 years is going to be in Wyoming anyway. I think we can shortstop this whole process by giving in now. Senator Wehrbein, that would not only solve your problem, but it would also lessen the strain on the Nebraska treasury by doing away...it's only a question of time before we do away with the Nebraska Legislature. I...in order to foil this plot, on the part of Senator Wehrbein, to eliminate Nebraska, I am going to vote against this, and I urge everyone else to do so also. I'll relinquish the rest of my time.

PRESIDENT ROBAK: Thank you, Senator Tyson. Senator Wehrbein.

SENATOR WEHRBEIN: I'm going to call the question, please.
